"Engineers operate at the interface between Science and Society"

To identify the great works done by our hard working engineers each year 15th September is celebrated as Engineers' Day marking the birthday of Sir Mokshagundam Visvesvaraya, recognizing his contributions in the field of hydel energy in India. The most outstanding Engineer of all times, the engineering fraternity of India celebrates "Engineer's Day" every year . It was this day 154 years ago that this great contributor was born.

Engineering is not merely knowing and being knowledgeable; engineering is not merely analysis; engineering is not merely the possession of the capacity to get elegant solutions to non-existent engineering problems; engineering is practicing the art of the organized forcing of technological change.

The objectives of celebrations of Engineer's Day were

• To promote and encourage the students to harness their skills.
• To produce quality Engineers for the bright future of our country.

On this occasion, Department of Information Technology organized a Debate Competition at individual class level to inculcate the competitive spirit among the budding engineers, followed by group activity.
Topics were
- Are Teachers losing their significance because of Technology Enabled Learning?
- Is Engineering Gender Biased?

Debate Winners.
